Thus he had knowledge of the actual border situation and supposedly informed his superiors. He kept in touch with the units of the Soviet Army stationed in Hungary on the basis of the Warsaw Pact; in the case of CSORNA those stationed in Győr.

He did not officially belong to the Hungarian Army although he had insight into everything and his advice was unexceptionally obeyed.

At the seat of the district he constantly wore the uniform of a staff-officer of the Rumanian Border Guard; in the area he usually was clad in civilian clothes.

~~He gave his advice through interp~~ He communicated with the district co. through an interpreter. (This as a rule was unnecessary because the district co.'s ~~was~~ was received their supplementary indoctrination in the Soviet Union ~~as a rule~~)

District political deputy

This officer - captain or major as a rule - was ordered on the side of the district co. to ~~control~~ supervise the ~~functioning~~ activities from the political viewpoint. He was in close collaboration with the Political Group Command of Headquarters. He directed the political indoctrination of the entire district ~~in the case of~~ in accordance with the instructions of above organ. It was his resp. the political department's (consisting of 3-4 officers) duty to elaborate the tematic of the political causes. He had to give the highlights on the political situation and the daily political events, the official policy of the government were interpreted on this basis. The political deputy of the reserve-company of the Railroad-Combating Group (if small in number its political apparatus) and the political deputies of the battalions got their instructions from the District Political Deputy.

At the seat of the district he delivered lectures personally to the officers at the same time supervising their political maturity.
